Quilt show highlights Fair

A total of 94 full-sized quilts and quilted items made a colorful and exciting background for Elk Point Agricultural Society's Fair 2005. Quilts covered the arena Plexiglas from player's bench to penalty box, and hung on rows of racks, while smaller items were displayed on old-fashioned drying racks and antique wooden ironing boards.

"It's amazing how [quilt show organizer Verona Lea Flanders] gets so many different quilts every year," marveled Grace Pinder, one of the dedicated quilters who attended the show. Many other viewers echoed that sentiment.

The quilts on display included everything from a 1930s coverlet combining cross-stitching and quilting to a primary-colored 'rag time' quilt embellished with ladybugs, from painstakingly handquilted applique' designs to a chenille-look throw created from four layers of brushed cotton.

Lila Yakimec of St. Paul, one of many new exhibitors this year, won the People's Choice award for small items with one of five fabric pictures she brought to the show, while a quilt made by Millie Orr as a wedding gift won the full size items award. Both awards were selections of fabric for future projects.

A new category this year brought in 20 'works in progress' which allowed viewers a glimpse at the lengthy process of creating a fabric masterpiece.

A number of Elk Point's most dedicated quilters were on hand Sunday, and worked together to hand-tie two Red Cross quilts.

Entries were up in a number of categories of the Bench Fair, where Christina Brown claimed the Grand Aggregate award sponsored by CNRL for a second consecutive year, with Millie Orr taking the runner-up award from E-Can Oilfield Services and Lillian Balazs the third prize from B & R Eckels.

Brown also claimed section wins in Knitting, Crochet and Weaving, sponsored by Apple Drugs, Fresh Fruit, sponsored by Woody's Trophy and Gift Shop, Baking, sponsored by Elk Point Co-op and the Seniors Fair, sponsored by CNRL. Orr claimed the Empress Restaurant award for top honours in Canning.

Jennifer Flanders won the adult section of Creative Writing, sponsored by the Elk Point Review, with Eric Mosley the Youth category winner and Laura Shapka the Junior winner.

Fair Board chair Donna Bassett won the Sewing category, sponsored by B & R Eckels, with the Junior award going to Kelsey Lindquist.

Lesia Sherwin took home the Elk Point Insurance and Realty award in Arts, Crafts and Hobbies, with Eric Mosley accepting the Junior award.

Remembering Happy Trails: wagon train enthusiasts look back at Heinsburg reunion

By VICKI BROOKER

Review Staff

It's been almost a decade since the Happy Trails wagon trains took their own sweet time touring the back roads and tree-shaded trails north and east of Elk Point. Close to 30 of the folks who took part in those treks of bygone years and their families gathered in Heinsburg on Saturday to reminisce about their experiences.

Reunion organizer Joe Brunner said he had "expected a few more. About 50 said they were coming." However, he noted that summer continues to be a busy time, even without the annual wagon expeditions which once were a greatly anticipated part of these people's summer schedule.

Fat albums bulging with photos were passed around and exclaimed over, with plenty of conversations starting with "I remember this!" and "Wasn't this the time that...." Funny incidents and potential disasters were all rehashed, as the trail riders and wagoneers remembered rainy days, star-studded nights and the welcome pot of hot coffee that awaited them at the end of the trail.

Those who have passed on since those times were remembered with a special memorial. Brunner read a poem from the point of a departed wagon man, noting that participants were like one big family. "They touched our lives, and we touched theirs." Roy Scott recited the Cowboy's Prayer, and Grace Meger gave a musical tribute with "The Old Rugged Cross."

Everyone enjoyed a bountiful potluck supper, placed their silent auction bids on two beautiful western-theme drawings by Myrna Golden Rybak, and waited hopefully for their names to be drawn for door prizes.

The evening wound up with good music and more good conversation as everyone remembered their adventures on the Happy Trails wagon trains.

Rollover victim tied to thefts

By Cst. Sean McGee
Elk Point RCMP

On July 31, Elk Point RCMP arrested a male subject involved in a single vehicle rollover with a stolen vehicle on Lakewood Road north of Elk Point. The male subject was transported to Elk Point Health Centre with a female occupant of the vehicle to be treated for their injuries.

Happy Memories

Organizer Joe Brunner welcomed participants to the Happy Trails Wagon Train Reunion. He also joined Grace Meger, Roy Scott and Marjorie Scott in the tribute to a number of former wagon train participants who have passed on since the days when the annual trains roamed the hills and valleys of north-east Alberta in search of fun and adventure.

VICKI BROOKER PHOTOS

Further investigation showed that the male was lying about his identity and was in possession of numerous stolen items. These items have been traced to a string of break-ins to residences and vehicle thefts throughout the central and eastern areas of Alberta. The subject is currently in custody and refuses to provide his true identity to police.

The detachment areas currently involved in the investigation are Edmonton, Westlock, Tofield, Sherwood Park, Vegreville, Elk Point, Kitscoty, St. Paul Ident and Bonnyville. The investigation is ongoing and updates will be given when they become available.

Tourist Centre has many visitors, lost medal

By JENNIFER FLANDERS
Tourist Information Clerk

It has been a very interesting summer. Elk Point has had visitors from all across Canada, from BC to New Brunswick and also from the States. Some people were returning to our great town after visiting in previous years, some people had never been here before and were pleasantly surprised, and one of Peter Fidler's great-grandsons even made the trek out from Ontario to see our statue.

The Iron Horse Trail has been drawing visitors to our town, as have events like our Canada Day celebrations and the Centennial Relay. We have received a lot of positive feedback, although some visitors wish we had public washrooms in our Tourist Centre and free Elk Point stickers to decorate their RVs with.

One young visitor accidentally left their Calgary Minor Soccer medal by the Tourist Centre flowers on about August 7, so hopefully they revisit our town to reclaim it someday.

You may recall that earlier this summer the Tourist Centre was host to a family of badgers. While the badgers have since moved on, it is still the best place in town to see gophers.

Here's hoping the rest of the summer is just as great and that our weird weather cooperates with your plans, whether you are camping, hiking, playing sports, or anything else. Stop by sometime!

Elk Point Tourist Information Centre is located along the service road south of Northern Lights Library System and is open from Wednesday through Sunday until August 28.

Drop by and pick up some information so you can plan your 2006 vacation during the winter months, as well as finding out all about great spots to spend those beautiful autumn weekends.

Outstanding talent displayed at Fair

It never ceases to amaze us when we see the community's best on display, as it was at this weekend's Elk Point Fair.

This year's quilt show was outstanding. If a person were to add up all the hours that went into creating those marvelous pieces of fabric art, it would stretch into years and years of painstaking stitching. The designs were many and varied, from the homey patchwork types to elaborate combinations of tiny pieces of cloth into kaleidoscopic designs glowing with colour.

Crafts of all kinds, from knitting and crochet, to sewing, to painting, to moose horn carving, showed the patience and skill of entrants from young pre-teens to seniors. The display of photography showed yet another skill, with excellent composition on many entries.

Green thumbs had their day in the spotlight, also, with their finest produce of vegetable gardens, berry bushes, flowerbeds, grain and hayfields as well as well-tended house plants, on display.

Creative writing entries were few, but entertaining.

A wide variety of Junior Fair entries showed the youngsters have spent the summer knee-deep in projects ranging from paper flowers to Lego structures.

All in all, the show was well worth the effort put forth by both organizers and entrants. Viewing the fair was a great way to spend a Sunday afternoon.

The generosity of numerous sponsors and prize donors helps to reward the efforts of these talented folk who chose to share their best work with the community. The ribbons, cash and merchandise prizes are small recognition of enormous talent shown by the residents of our community and its neighbours.

Way Back When...

Development, doctor woes and dedication

HERE'S THE NEWS THAT MADE THE HEADLINES IN THE ELK POINT REVIEW AND LAKELAND REVIEW FOR THE WEEK OF AUGUST 17 IN...

1985

Construction of a new, half-million-dollar Esso bulk oil facility was on hold due to a land dispute that resulted in moving the project to a different lot than originally planned. Town Council agreed to get ready for more new development, with highway commercial lots and the development of phase two of their industrial park high on the agenda of a five-hour Council meeting.

1990

A very aggressive recruitment program to find another doctor was underway as Dr. Frank Estey made the decision to close his Elk Point practice. Norma Berg won the Elk Point Fair aggregate award for the fourth time in five years, along with section wins in the fresh fruit, cut flowers and house plant sections.

1995

Fifty years of peace was marked by the dedication of Elk Point's new cenotaph, with Elk Point Royal Canadian Legion member Genevieve Russell presiding over the unveiling. Christina Brown won her second Elk Point Fair aggregate in two years, as well as three fair sections and a special award for having the most entries in the fair.

2000

An exceptional quilt show highlighted the Elk Point Fair, with no less than 55 handcrafted quilts on display, at least three of them over a century old. Lois Yaremkevich, who topped four sections with her entries, won the Grand Aggregate award. Sheep were dead and missing after a freak windstorm swept through a farmyard northwest of Elk Point, decimating Bill and Sheila Kulczycki's shelter-belt.

GUEST COLUMN

The power of praise

The highly decorated statesman, the Duke of Wellington, was asked late in life what he would have done differently. He did not say he would change the way he fought the magnificent Battle of Waterloo - or any other battle. He simply said, "I should have given more praise."

We all have the need to be accepted and appreciated. Because we're all trying, we need to know that our daily efforts to change and improve are acknowledged by someone. We all need to know that we matter. Unfortunately, some of us go through the day never hearing a kind word, an encouraging comment, or even the faintest expression of praise. And yet, it only takes seconds of time and ounces of energy to let others know that we appreciate them.

Those daily deposits of praise and approval both strengthen the sender and encourage the receiver. Praise should be deserved, specific and sincere. If we look for opportunities to praise, we will find them all around us: in the small, struggling steps of a child, in the improved attitude of a teenager, in the extra effort of a spouse, or in the dedication of a co-worker.

As I have looked around our community of Elk Point, my thoughts have focused on the positive aspects of our community. I have wondered if these people have been thanked or acknowledged in any way to let them know how proud we are of what they have done or are doing. In other words, have they received any praise from anyone? For example, our local MLA. His job has got to be one tough one in trying to please the people and yet be fair at the same time. Ray, as a member of our community, thank you for trying your best. We know you try to look at the whole picture and then make the best decision. In other words, we know you do your homework. Thanks, Ray.

Another person and group of people is our own Chamber of Commerce. Imagine meeting over the summer trying to find solutions. That takes a lot of dedication, research, pondering and generally just trying to think things through so that the right decisions are made on behalf of the community. Thank you, Sandy and everyone in the Chamber of Commerce.

Say, have you noticed the big new sign that lists the businesses available in the community. Good going, Elk Point and District Lions!

Then there are our local business people who try to bring into their stores "stuff" they feel the community needs, wants and will buy. I will never forget what was said at the funeral of Paul Stepa, a pioneer person of real estate in Elk Point. He was quoted as saying, "If you can't buy it here, you don't need it." Yes, times have changed, and I realize people don't always think like that anymore because it has become easier to travel to other locations to buy what one needs and wants. However, our local business people are trying. So to all of you, please accept our thanks for your efforts in trying to please us.

Last but not least, let me mention the maintenance people of the Town staff. I know as soon as I mention the good observations of what these people do, others of you will note the things you don't like about what they do. It is like food preferences. Some people like broccoli and some people don't. So there you go. Anyway, to all the Town maintenance staff, thank you for trying your best.

I have only given a few examples from our community of my observations of the good things that are happening. You will know of others. Remember, they need to hear thanks!

Carving highlights Seniors Section

A finely detailed carving of a Native chief aboard his horse, created from a moose horn by Ernie Poitras highlighted the Seniors Section of the Elk Point Fair.

A quilt adorned with 42 vintage family pictures, created by Deanna Easthope, draws the interest of a quilt show browser. Quilts large and small filled almost half of A. G. Ross Arena.

Christmas decor and a hanging featuring heart-shaped photo frames were among the small quilted items on display.

Scam Protection

Internet and telephone scams are on the list for some of the fastest growing types of fraud in Canada. There are thousands of cases every year. Scam artists are up to date and well-organized, using the latest technology to trap their victims. They have access to professional marketing materials, and well-crafted and researched telephone scripts. They also know how to put you at ease on the phone while they impersonate legitimate businesses and charities.

If you are suspicious of a telemarketing call or email, there are steps you can take to check the authenticity of the company.

Does the so called company or bank require any personal information, including account details, or a social insurance number? Any legitimate financial institution will already have all your information on file, there is no reason to ask for it! Also beware of "lottery winnings". Under no circumstances should any company require personal banking information, whatsoever. Always be suspicious if you have to pay for something you have "won". Scam artists will pressure you to make a quick decision. Ask for a call-back number and valid references. Taking time to check out resources that are available to you, such as the Better Business Bureau, and Phonebusters, will help you recognize fraud and prevent yourself from becoming a victim.

Medal win celebrates late coach's dream

By DOUG BASSETT AND

Review Sports

After 10 straight weeks of baseball starting in the first of May, then back-to-back provincial ball weekends, the body was getting a little drained and a break was welcome. But now after couple of weeks' break, it seems a little boring and it's time to get out and write again. The month of August has always been a tough month to fill with any kind of sports. I guess you could call this my downtime.

While we were so busy in our own little world in Elk Point, hosting the bantam girls one weekend, then the midget boys and pee-wee boys provincial tournaments the next weekend, we didn't have time to keep up on what was happening at the Masters Games in Edmonton, but some gold medals were happening and one was captured with the help of non other than our very own "Mr. Fastball", Jason Jenner. The team is the Edmonton A's, and here is their story, contributed by Kris Ann Jenner.

Receiving the gold medal in the Edmonton Masters Games was for many Edmonton A's players a final triumph for their coach of many years, Mac Danyluk.

It started many years ago, with a few junior players from Elk Point being asked to join the Andrew A's. Jason Jenner and Troy Lorenson were two of these players that joined with that Andrew team. As the years progressed the bond that formed within this team strengthened until 20 years later, many of the original Andrew Junior team played together in the Edmonton Masters Games.

The coach, Mac Danyluk was an integral part of the successes and respect the team received over the years. Mac's idea was to get together for the Masters Games for one final hurrah! It was devastating to the team when on April 15th, 2005, Mac passed away and was unable to complete his dream. It was at this point that a few key players decided to join together and dedicate their desire to compete in Mac's memory. The Edmonton A's were created and the name Mac was proudly displayed on the front of their jerseys.

Sorrow and joy started the 2005 season and it was very apparent that Mac was missed. Tournaments, provincials and the Master's Games consumed the players in their season. Twenty players made up the Edmonton A's and they played a total of 10 games in the Masters Games. Many of the fastball teams were from Australia, some from B.C. and a few from around the Edmonton area.

Many fans were in attendance and the cheers shouted by family and Elk Point friends made the players continue to excel in their sport.

The Edmonton A's went undefeated throughout the tournament and the final game was held at John Fry Park against a team out of Victoria, B.C. The A's ended up receiving the Gold medal with the final score of 7 to 3.

As the team was celebrating their victory, Mac's son sprinkled some of his father's ashes in the third base coach's box. The gold medals hung around the players' necks and tears were flowing from Mac's daughter's eyes.

It was a journey that everyone was proud to be part of. Mac would have been delighted at the outcome of his team, but possibly more proud of the fact that the team pulled together in competition, friendship and for the love of the game of fastball.

On July 24 to 29, club members Robyn Ockerman, Marvin Ockerman and Bryant Schnurer went to Battle Lake 4-H Centre for PDP - People Developing People. They took part in self-awareness sessions, an environmentally safe forum session and a chili cook-off, and made lots of friends. This camp is for members 13 to 15 years old. Robyn encourages all members to go.

Chelsea Schnurer attended Horse Classic in Olds on July 27 to 29. She placed third provincially in Horse Hippology. Since she was in the top four, she is heading to Denver, Colorado for the Western 4-H Horse Classic, January 4 to 8, 2006. This past weekend, Chelsea went to the 4-H Summer Equestrian Games in Millarville, Alberta as part of the Northeast Team.

The Regional Horse Camp was held at the Vermilion Fair Grounds August 3 to 6. Eight of our horse members attended. Some clinics were: farrier, roping, health, gymkhana and equitation. They also got to go in a costume parade and drill team. They saw the famous Lippizaner Stallions up close.

Schools as learning communities

By BARBARA GRINDER

Alberta Teachers' Association
Summer Series

In the Alberta Commission on Learning's final report, 'Every Child Learns, Every Child Succeeds,' it was recommended that every school in the province operate as a professional learning community (PLC), dedicated to continuous improvement in student achievement. What does this mean and how is it different from what schools have always done?

Building a PLC is not a matter of what you say, but what you do, says Judi Hadden, an award-winning teacher and educational supervisor with 22 years of experience in Alberta's education system. Currently the principal of Taber's Central Elementary School, Hadden defines a PLC as a school where the entire staff is committed to student learning, rather than teaching subjects. "All of our decisions are focused on what's best for the students. Our vision as a school is based on providing a fully inclusive climate of learning for all our students, regardless of their abilities and needs."

The PLC attempts to provide students with a learning experience that is deeper and more meaningful. "Everyone in the school — students, support staff and teachers — is expected to treat everyone with respect," Hadden says. "All students are expected to care for one another and value one another. No one is left out, everyone has a voice," she adds, "even though we have a variety of children with many needs as well as a large population of students for whom English is a new language. All students have ownership of their own learning and get practice in student-led conferences, where they can discuss issues and ask questions. And because respect and responsibility are keywords in the school, we take care of each and don't have any discipline problems."

Teachers and school administrators in a PLC instruct and share their own learning and experiences, and professional development (PD) is a vital part of their teaching agenda. "Our teachers are encouraged to read educational literature, and we find the money to support a high level of PD activities — about $35,000 last year. Usually, we send at least two teachers to any PD activity, because we've found it contributes to a better sharing of the learning experiences. Anyone who goes to a PD activity is expected to come back and share the ideas with the rest of the staff. I try to keep up with new developments and research in education myself, so I can set a direction for my teachers and point out articles worth reading. I like to include tidbits of learning that might be of interest in our Monday morning e-mail bulletin," Hadden notes.

"Consensus decision making and shared leadership are necessary components. We have regular staff meetings chaired by teachers, but I also make sure all teachers have minimal lunch and recess supervision as well as scheduled time during the school day for professional growth in learning teams. And we schedule a half-day every month during school hours for teachers to get together and share what they're thinking and doing. Twice a year, we go back to our vision statement and do a thorough evaluation of our progress and success in meeting our goals and exchange feedback. True consensus building takes time and persistence, but once it's working, you can move forward quite easily."

Achieving a culture of learning, respect and responsibility takes collaboration, passion and trust, Hadden says, but it results in a school where the students and staff are all excited about learning.

Frog Lake youths present fashion show

By KRISTI PATTON
Review Staff

Frog Lake youth received the opportunity to tell family and friends why they were beautiful inside and out after a two-week program ending with a fashion show.

The program put on by Paradigm Esteem had kids 10 to 18 complete a two-week program which included book learning sessions and classes on how to walk in a fashion show.

"The main goal is for the youth to learn why they are beautiful," said Paradigm Esteem president and CEO Amanda Welliver. "We teach teens the art of appreciation, so they learn to appreciate what they have and who they are and to stop comparing themselves to others."

Welliver said she came up with the idea for the program because she was a teen who was verbally and emotionally abused by her peers in her youth because she had low self-esteem.

Howie Fleming, 15, was one of the Frog Lake youths involved in the program and was surprised with what he learned.

"I thought at first it was going to just be some (girly) fashion show, but I just went with it," said Fleming.

Welliver noted Fleming's attitude at the beginning of the program was totally against being a part of it.

"It was actually pretty good. My self esteem has gone up and I learned how to handle problems," said Fleming, who commented he would do it again.

The program is based out of Edmonton where this past school season they added it as four-and-a-half month session which students can take for credits.

The Frog Lake youths

received two weeks of training on different subjects from healthy relationships to budget planning, learned how to handle themselves at a fashion show and received head shots in a sitting with a professional photographer.

Lorraine Quinney, social development director of Frog Lake, had been working with self-esteem in parents and thought the youth Paradigm program would complement well what the parent program was doing.

"It brings them out and opens them up. A lot of kids need that in school," said Quinney.

"There is more smiling now and more positive, outgoing attitudes as the kids aren't as shy."

Paradigm Esteem will hold another two-week learning session in Saddle Lake next with the Fashion show being presented on Sept. 1.

Kelly Stanley poses on the catwalk to show off her outfit during the Frog Lake Youth Fashion Show. The youth were part of a self-esteem program involving a number of topics including how to handle themselves on the catwalk.
